The Wayback Machine - https://web.archive.org/web/20090525095643/http://neogt.com:80/2009/01/alan-watt-is-trying-to-cover-his-tracks/

Neo Grand Thinkers

Alan Watt is Trying to Cover His Tracks

Written on January 14, 2009

After the Watt-Kealey debate on Outlaw (direct link to outlawjournalism, neogt backup) Alan has decided to cover his tracks. Since he has been exposed of lying, deceit, and his act of treachery against many people of his [once] loyal audience, he has no other choice but to run,hide, and play stupid.

This cannot be tolerated. Alan has been viewed as an astounding teacher in the past, but now, after everyone has seen his true colors, rarely anyone really believes him anymore.

You should not tolerate a liar under the guise of a "truthful researcher."

You can get an archive of Glen Kealey's website, which is evidence of Alan Watt stealing his work and misleading his audience, here. (http://www.neogt.com/files/compressed/kealey_archive.zip)

Feel free to redistribute this file. Save it somewhere and spread it around. If you are having trouble opening the HTML files, try viewing them in an HTML editor, or simply with Notepad, Wordpad, Microsoft Word, of OpenOffice (Word).

Share This Post:

- Digg Digg
- Delicious Delicious
- Stumble Upon Stumble Upon

Back to Top

3 Comments

1.
8:07 pm - January 14th, 2009

Evan Long says:

Thanks for the archive.

2.
8:38 pm - January 14th, 2009

Neo says:

No problem.

Mirrors:
http://www.archive.org/details/GlenKealeyArchive
http://www.megaupload.com/?d=1B32WFUW

3.

11:41 am - April 16th, 2009

sovereignjohn says:

drop.io is a great place to store files, it seems to me to be a great new social network to share all kinds of data. The storage comes with a chat feature where interested people can chat about the saved file. You can save a file without any sign up. You can give permission to others to add to file.

http://drop.io/howto
I have no connection to drop.io except as a user. I'm hoping that others use drop.io so it can grow, add more features and if I see a drop of yours that I like I can interact with it in some very social ways.

PS
You can even set up podcasts to share your audio

Leave a Comment

Name (required)

Email (will not be published) (required)

Website

Comment

Post Comment

Copyright © 2009 Neo Grand Thinkers